

Dear Members,

Electricity, a necessity of our daily existence, is something we often take for granted until it's absent. It's said that electricity is like magic – you only notice it when it's not there, and your co-op has worked tirelessly to maintain a consistent and dependable flow of power to every home and business so that magic can continue.

Our linemen and operational teams, the real heroes behind the scenes, have risen to the occasion during many unforeseen events. They've turned challenges into opportunities faster than you can say, "Is the power back on yet?" Thanks to their dedication, I am delighted to share that our commitment to reliability has yielded tangible results, with the average outage per consumer now standing at an impressive 81 minutes, while maintaining nearly 5,000 miles of line. To put that into perspective, the U.S. Energy Information Administration reports over 7 hours of power interruptions annually for consumers across the country.

But let's not forget our after-hours answering service, the unsung heroes of midnight power emergencies, who've answered a whopping 4,965 calls, ensuring assistance whenever needed. And our right-of-way crews? They've cleared over 250,000 feet of potential hazards, making sure our power lines stay hazard-free.

Through December, Northwestern Electric Cooperative replaced an additional 1,300 poles due to our rigorous annual pole inspection process. In addition, we had new construction of 32,500 feet of single-phase line and over 114,000 feet of three-phase line, responding to the evolving needs of our members.

Your cooperative also focused on empowering our community through engaging events.

Our drive-through annual meeting was a tremendous success, with an astounding 1,270 members attending, constituting 21% of our membership. This not only far exceeded the quorum of 298 members, but also earned us the highest attendance percentage in the state.

We also hosted our second annual Touch-a-Truck event, providing a hands-on-learning experience full of local businesses and lots of fun activities for attendees of all ages. We also recognized the invaluable contribution of our rural fire departments that evening by distributing twenty-four $1,000 checks to support their essential services.

Our commitment to the community also extended beyond our cooperative's events, as Northwestern Electric Cooperative hosted the hot-dog feed at the Woodward Elks Rodeo and several other feeds at local county fairs. We also provided educational trips and scholarship opportunities to our local students.

Even with so many positive memories in 2023, we cannot forget the challenges our cooperative faced as well. Inflation has loomed large since the disruptive onset of the Covid pandemic. Increases in vehicles, fuel, poles, wire, labor, interest costs and other material have all risen significantly.

However, in the face of these financial disruptions, we have successfully weathered the storm. Our approach has been marked by strategic planning, operational efficiency, and a dedication to ensuring the affordability of our services.

While we face the challenge of inflation, economic difficulties, and look back to the events of the past year, let us celebrate the resilience of our Cooperative.

Together, we will keep the lights on and confront whatever challenges come our way; because we were built by members, for members, to weather any storm that comes our way.
